him, but "offered nothing new or great."

Tiotjens and Trebelli, so popular in England, he apparently did not hear at all.

For Brignoll he had scant admiration, though this tenor was a favorite with society, and even Campanini proved somewhat of a disappointment.

By a singular coincidence I once heard Brignoll and Jean de Reszke in the same opera, Mozart's "Don Giovanni," De opera, Mozart's "Don Giovanni," De street and Central Park West, 8:15 P. M. popera, Mozart's "Don Giovanni," Descriptions at that time (1874) being a young barytone known as Signor di Reschi. Tietjens was the Donna Anna, Nzw York, April 16.
